

by Jacqueline Lau

Off the coast of the great Northwest
And around the Cayman Islands
The fins, the tanks and scuba gear
Can be spotted by the thousands

Clear, warm seas call out to you
As do the deep, dark waters
But don't neglect to learn the facts
For it's knowledge which gives you power

Because the pressure will go up
As you make your way down below
You must remember to breathe, breathe, breathe
'Cause you don't want your lungs to blow!

And please do not descend too fast
Equalize every meter or so
Simply wiggle around your jaw a bit
Or blow hard against your plugged nose

I hope you've learned something important today
About the fine sport of diving
It's fun, it's exciting, it's something new But please know your stuff before trying!