

Oh what a sight, that fateful day,
When 2 friends, to my dismay, challenged each other to dive deep,
so both of them took a great leap...
oh what a price they had to pay.

Down the brooding waters on they went rapidly did they make their descent one began to feel terribly cold the other still tried to be bold while the cruel waters would not relent.

Both began to feel compressed, but certainly they weren't depressed,
floating with the fish of the sea, drunk with joy, cheerful as can be, little did they know what was next.

Suddenly everything turned black,
'Where am I?' said a confused Jack Through torturing chokes and bends
They both feared they were coming to their ends
But there simply was no turning back.

Someone spotted 2 bodies afar floating,
Boy did they look like they were bloating
'No breathing,' the doctor perceived,
So blindly gave them pure oxygen to breathe,
Surely they didn't end up hypoventilating.